Center for Vein Restoration: The Leading Option for Treating Venous Insufficiency in Annapolis

Our treatment model and philosophy at The Center for Vein Restoration is focused around one basic tenet, "the treatment of varicose veins and its cause venous insufficiency is not a luxury but a necessity," states Dr. Sanjiv Lakhanpal, cardiovascular surgeon and the Center's founder. "Unfortunately many of our patients have been dealing with leg pain, swelling, visible varicose veins and even ulcers for many years because their symptoms have been misdiagnosed." Dr. Lakhanpal continues, "Some have been told there is no cure for what is ailing them, while others have even been told the issue is in their mind." The Center for Vein Restoration has been very successful because the Center's team has been able to offer these people a quick and relatively pain free treatment that is available in the office and is covered by most insurance plans.

The Center for Vein Restoration has assembled a team of experts unparalleled in the Annapolis area. This physician team includes the Center's founder Dr. Sanjiv Lakhanpal, Dr. Jaime F. Marquez and Dr. Jerrilyn Jutton. Dr. Lakhanpal is a cardiothoracic and vascular surgeon, he has chaired various Cardiac surgery Programs in the region. Dr. Lakhanpal's is often sought out as a health expert by local television and radio stations. Dr. Lakhanpal's most recent TV appearance was with US Surgeon General, Rear Admiral Kenneth P. Moritsugu. Dr. Marquez is also a board certified cardiothoracic and vascular surgeon and has been voted "Top Doctor" by Washingtonian magazine. Dr. Marquez is also the former chief of surgery and past president of the medical staff at Washington Adventist Hospital. Dr. Jerrilyn Jutton is a board certified in general surgery, and former chief of surgery at a leading HMO and Anne Arundel Hospital Center. Dr. Jutton is nationally recognized for her expertise in the surgical treatment of disease afflicting women as well as breast health and treatment.

The Center for Vein Restoration has performed more in office venous ablation procedures than any group in the Annapolis area. In addition to performing this minimally invasive venous ablation procedure, the Center also offers sclerotherapy and the most advanced laser skin treatment of surface varicose veins and spider veins.
